Celebrating CTE Month: Industrial and Engineering Systems

Previously known as Manufacturing Technology, the Industrial and Engineering Systems (IES) program at PHS is taught by Nick Traini. This is Mr. Traini's sixth year at PHS and he has done an outstanding job at providing students with advanced skills in a CTE classroom.

Students in IES learn a variety of shop skills and gain experience and knowledge using and operating industry standard equipment. The program encompasses three main areas; manufacturing technology, which focuses on welding and metal fabrication; drafting and design, where students learn how to use computer-aided drafting programs to design and interpret project plans; and machine tool where students learn the machining process of metal fabrication which focuses more on the precision side of fabricating.

Something new this year is that students have the opportunity to get an American Welding Society structural steel qualification, which is an industry-recognized certificate.

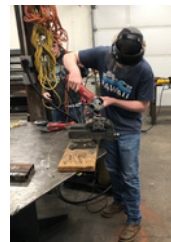

The capstone course for the IES program is the advanced project class where students take the skills and knowledge learned from all the prerequisites and apply them to design and build a personal project. Within the industrial and engineering systems program, students can earn up to four college credits through the LBCC College Now program.

Graduate EVERY student and transition each of them into a job, training, or college.
